A2 - Written Mediation 3: Learning Sequence

You are what you eat.

Luke is a student from the USA who is coming to Spain for two weeks. He is on an exchange programme with his school and will stay with you. Luke and you have been exchanging e-mails every week to give information about yourselves and get to know each other better. Luke sent an e-mail last week saying that he is a bit worried about the food in Spain. He told you that he is afraid of trying new foods. He prefers pizza and hot dogs to fruit and vegetables. Luke thinks he will have a hard time because he will not like the food in a different country. Write an e-mail to Luke telling him about the benefits of a balanced diet and the importance of eating fruit and vegetables.

Your e-mail to Luke should be between 65 to 80 words. Remember that you have to use paragraphs and follow the structure of an informal e-mail.

In written mediation, you need to understand the texts and the images provided. When you understand all the ideas, try to explain your message in your own words.

Make sure it is clear why you are talking about the topic. Refer to the context.

   b) Underline the main ideas you will use in the e-mail to Luke.

Let's prepare the language!

1. Discuss advantages and benefits

1. Read this text written by a nutritionist. He is giving us information about what a healthy diet consists of and the benefits it has. Underline the names of the foods you find.

A healthy diet is very important. It can make you feel great and gives your body all the elements it needs. Fish, meat and eggs contain protein that will keep your muscles strong. A healthy diet helps your body to fight against infections.

Cereals, grains, nuts and seeds are a great way to include carbohydrates in your diet. They give you energy to do a lot of activities. If you feel tired after doing sport, eat some bread, biscuits or a cereal bar and you will soon feel better.

Fruit and vegetables are a very good source of vitamins, minerals and fibre. They contain a lot of water and will keep you hydrated.

Milk, yoghurt and cheese have got a lot of calcium. Including these foods in your diet, will make your bones and teeth stronger. It really makes a difference to your body.

Combine healthy ingredients and you will discover new flavours and new textures to enjoy every meal, every day!
